

Toward a Full Worldview

Questions: How you answer the basic questions of life. Who is God? Who is man? Where did we come from? Where are we going? What happens when we die? What is death anyway? Why do we die? Where does evil come from? What is nature, and where did it come from? What is the chief end of man?

Praxis: What you actually do. Whether you wash your car, and how often. Whether you cheat on your spouse, or your taxes. What toothpaste you use. What you wear. How you spend your money. How you talk, and to whom.

Story: What story you think you're living in. This is not about answering questions like "Where did all this come from?"—that's the Questions part of the worldview. This is about where your loyalties lie. Who are your people? With whom do you identify; for whom do you cheer? Who belongs to you, whether you want them or not?

Liturgy/Symbol: How you continually enact your allegiance to your people and reinforce your position in the particular story you believe you're living in. What do you actually do in worship? What regular acts of respect and devotion do you perform? What constitutes blasphemy?
